Supporting families affected by alcohol and other drugs

Family Drug Support (FDS) is a caring, non-religious and non-judgemental organisation. FDS is primarily made up of volunteers who have experienced first-hand the trauma and chaos of having family members with drug dependency. Most have travelled the same road.

Tony formed Family Drug Support in 1997 after he lost his son to a heroin overdose. Grieving, Tony felt frustrated by the general apathy and ignorance of his own experience.
This was also the plight of many other families. Realising this was but the tip of the iceberg, a public meeting was called where hundreds of people attended and FDS was formed.

Wednesday 2 September
